

It's Not Really About Sex

By Geoffrey Hoppe

Catchy headline, eh? “Sex” has a certain allure. Just the word itself can be provocative and seductive. I know, because this morning as I fired up my laptop and surfed over to CNN News, I noticed many headlines and photos that implied sex.

For instance, there’s a big sex scandal involving Brett Favre, quarterback for the Minnesota Vikings. He was my hero when he played for my team – the Green Bay Packers – but he fell out of grace when he deserted Green Bay and went to archrival Minnesota. Now he’s being accused of sending lewd messages and pictures to a comely young female news reporter. It could mark the end of his 18-year marriage and his high-profile professional career, not because he’ll be forced to resign, but because the sexual virus energy he’s now caught in will greatly reduce his effectiveness on the playing field, and probably at home as well.

Many of the other articles and banner ads on CNN were highly suggestive, if not downright blatant about sex. I’m not talking about the sacred hieros gamos kind of sex but the bawdy, low-vibration and energy-feeding kind of sex. Which brings me to my point:

In a recent article, I wrote about the important role of certified teachers as they bring the core Crimson Circle information to people around the world. Every weekend, there are teacher-presented classes being conducted somewhere in the world. The Crimson Circle teachers are much more than teachers – they are Awakening Facilitators. They set a safe energy for their students to experience the life-changing information offered by Tobias and Adamus Saint-Germain.

Of all of the courses offered by teachers, including the Dream-Walker trilogy (Death, Birth and Ascension), Aspectology and Synchronize, I consider Tobias’ Sexual Energies School (SES) to be the core-of-the-core class. Anyone who wants to become a Crimson Circle teacher has to take SES before they can take teacher training for any of the courses. I’d go so far as to say that every Shaumbra should strongly consider taking SES before they go any further on their awakening path.

The Sexual Energy School is not really about sex. It’s about loving yourself at a very sacred level. It’s about the integration of your masculine/feminine aspects. SES provides an understanding of how the core energies became separated eons of time ago, and how they can be brought back into unity, on an individual, personal basis.

On a very practical level, SES teaches us about the sexual energy virus. According to Tobias, this virus is caused by an imbalance in consciousness. It is not owned or controlled by anyone or anything. It’s not part of a conspiracy or sinister plot, and it doesn’t come from the “dark side” or even from our aspects. In many ways it’s like a flu or cold virus, passed from one person to another without discrimination. It steals energy and ultimately deprives a person of joy in their life.

Tobias offers insights on how to release the virus from your life. It’s called Aliyah, which coincidentally means “returning home” in the Hebrew language. Aliyah is about returning back to a place of love within your Self. Aliyah is a very personal experience. I’ve heard some Shaumbra who have not taken SES discuss and debate their perception of Aliyah, but alas, it is a personal experience that ultimately defies description.

Tobias said that this was the only way he knows of to release the consciousness virus. He was, of course, referring to loving your Self, completely and unconditionally. You don’t need to take the Sexual Energy School to do this but the class provides a safe space and professional guidance in which to deal with the many issues that come to the surface. Crimson Circle teachers are trained and experienced in dealing with virus-related challenges.

Even in the safe classroom environment, the SES class is challenging. Teachers report that the energies start moving in several days before the class begins. It affects things like emotions, eating and sleeping habits, electronics, and even the students’ journey to physically get to the class. There are definitely heavy feelings during the first day or two of the class. In other words, it’s not necessarily a smiley, feel-good weekend. However, by the end of the weekend most students have deep personal insights that later turn into personal transformations. In the surveys sent to students after the SES class, more than 65% say that the SES class was a life-changing event.

On a recent thread on the Crimson Circle Message Board someone asks the question, “What are people’s experiences with SES? Particularly, I’m curious to see where people fall on a scale ranging from good/enjoyable/informative to absolutely necessary/changed my life/caused me to awaken, etc.” Here are some of the responses from SES attendees:

“Essential understanding.”

“I actually think it should be a MUST for every human. It’s unbelievable how much is there. A whole new world.”

“SES is a life changing experience for everyone. I have taught several SES classes and it is an amazing experience to teach it as well. It is a class every human should take because every human is affected by the virus. For those who never seem to have the money, that is the virus in your life as well as your own victim aspects that keep you from taking the class. Linda has stated in several Shouds [during the Geoff and Linda show] that there are many [Crimson Circle] teachers who are willing to travel to teach a class.”

Or as my wife Linda so appropriately stated it, “You’ll never see life the same after taking SES.”
